

Via Huffington Post :

President-elect Barack Obama has launched the website change.gov, where one can find news about the transition and inauguration and information about his agenda. The site also has a place for people to share their ideas for government and their stories about the campaign.

According to DemConWatch , the site change.gov is slated to go live later today.

UPDATE: The site is now live and includes a link to the GSA's Presidential Transition Resources website. The site provides information for that prospective administration appointee or nominee.